Official Rules

- Every Shooters match is broken down into innings of play.
- In singles play, an inning is complete when all shooters are tossed.
- In doubles play, an inning is completed when both contestants shooting from the same target shoot all 3 of their shooters.
- An inning is completed when all contestants shoot all three of their shooters.
- Only one player, or team, can score points in an inning.

Value of the Shooter Tosses:

A shooter that is thrown through a hole in the target (knocked in by another player or otherwise falls in) scores the number of points assigned to the hole in which it fell.

A shooter that does not land in a hole scores zero points. The shooter must not touch the ground or any other portion of the court prior to landing in a hole or on the target. If a shooter touches the ground before landing on or in the target, it is a foul and must be removed from the target prior to the continuation of play.

A shooter that comes to rest anywhere except for in the holes of the target scores no points. Shooters must remain inside the hole for the duration of the inning in order to score points. If the shooter bounces out of the hole, even after landing inside the pocket, it scores no points.

A shooter which is declared to be a foul must be removed from the target surface prior to the continuation of play.

Scoring:

Only one player, or team, can score points in an inning. The player or team that scored the most points in the inning will have the points of the other player or team subtracted from their total. For example, if player #1 throws their shooters into the target holes that add up to 8 points and player #2 has shooters that add up to 3 points, player #1 would win the inning and score 5 points for the inning.
